Graduate Fellowships: Benefits for Students and Faculty

Professional and Academic Development (PAD) Seminar Series
Friday, December 16, 2011 – 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.
Welcome Center Auditorium

Discussion Topics:

- Applying for fellowships for underrepresented minorities in the sciences
- How a graduate student works with a faculty member to complete the application
- Why fellowships are beneficial to the student’s career
- Application procedure and putting together a well-focused proposal
- Review criteria to address
- How different types of fellowships provide different types and levels of funding
- Requesting a specific study section or review panel
- How reviewers look at fellowship proposals

Moderator:
Ambika Mathur, Associate Dean, Graduate School
ambika.mathur@wayne.edu

Panelists:
Nicholas Mischel, Graduate Student, Physiology
nmischel@med.wayne.edu

Christine Chow, Professor, Bio Chemistry
aa2178@wayne.edu

Matthew Galloway, Professor, Psychiatry
mgallow@med.wayne.edu

Patrick Mueller, Assistant Professor, Physiology pmueller@med.wayne.edu

Shermaine Mitchell-Ryan, Graduate Student, Cancer Biology smitchel@med.wayne.edu